Weekly Update

It was another great week in third grade! Hopefully everyone had a relaxing three day weekend and was able to enjoy Martin Luther King, Jr. Day!

In math time this week, we began working with patterns. Patterns in third grade include addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division rules. We will also be working with in-and-out boxes during our lessons on patterns. In-and-out boxes are common items on standardized tests, often times in association with a word problem.

During reading block, some of the concepts we studied throughout this week included text features and verb tenses. We briefly began looking at the past tense of irregular verbs and will continue to do so next week.

Next week is the final week of January to read for our goal of 380 minutes. Please keep encouraging your child to read!
