Weekly Update

We have had a FANTASTIC week in third grade! It is getting closer and closer to that last day of school, but we are still putting in a lot of effort and learning new things!

During math this week we studied quadrilaterals and how to classify and describe them. (This was somewhat of a review as we have discussed this topic previously!) We also studied 3D shapes and their attributes. Students can find and classify real life objects that are 3D!

We have been learning about how the past has affected and shaped our present during social studies this week. The class has taken a look at the different countries that sent explorers to the Americas and the reasons for their explorations.

Students have really been enjoying the countdown to the last day of school in our classroom and it is great to see their excitement for the new 'activity' planned for each day!
