Weekly Update

It has been a whirlwind of a week in third grade! We have been completing some benchmark assessments throughout the end of last week and this week as well. We have now completed the Pivot benchmark, a RAPS260 benchmark, and a practice IREAD 3 assessment. This data will help the third grade team of teachers determine each student's individual strengths and needs. We will use the data to guide our instruction and create groups for reading time using the information gathered through these assessments. The morning work that our homeroom does is designed to mirror questions that students will see on IREAD 3 this year. Please be sure to look this paper over with your child when it comes home at the end of each week. We go over the questions as a class and practice how to attack questions of this nature, but any and all help at home is beneficial as well. During math this week, we wrapped up our unit on multiplication, area, and perimeter with a performance task. We then just briefly began the next unit, which will focus on division and multiplication.
